1. After reviewing reference A, you may wish to add the following under Section III, PRESENT MULTIDISCIPLINARY ANALYSIS ACTIVITY IN THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY, on page 41, middle of page between "DI description" and the paragraph beginning with "The Dissemination of DO."

The Directorate for Administration (DA) has two components (Office of Communications and Office of Security) that are active in threat analysis. The OC effort is based upon a history of hostile threats and concern for safeguarding CIA communications, its facilities and its personnel. Through working relationships with other community components, threat information is collected and that product is shared with components inside CIA and with other agencies. As for analytical activity, the mounting evidence of hostile targeting of communications has prompted the Office of Communications to supplement its threat and vulnerability effort by adding one analyst position in November 1983 enhancing its multi-disciplinary threat analysis.
